THE HISTORY OF THE CITY OF BOSTON

STOWAWAY

The first time I saw the body was in a dark, cramped space. It was a car, I think. The driver's side door was open, and the body was slumped over the front passenger seat. I was alone in the car, and I didn't know what to do. I just sat there, staring at the body, feeling a mix of shock and fear. The car was old, and the interior was dark and cluttered. I didn't know who the person was, but I knew they were dead. I didn't know how long I had been in the car, but I knew I had to get out. I opened the driver's side door and stepped out into the night. The air was cold, and I felt a shiver run down my spine. I didn't know where I was, but I knew I had to find help. I walked for what felt like hours, but I never found anyone. I was alone in the dark, and I didn't know what to do. I just kept walking, trying to find my way out of the darkness. I didn't know how long I had been walking, but I knew I was exhausted. I finally found a small, dimly lit building. I went inside, and I saw a man sitting at a desk. I went up to him, and I told him what had happened. He looked at me for a moment, and then he nodded. He told me that I should go to the police station. I didn't know where that was, but I knew I had to go. I walked for what felt like hours, but I never found anyone.
